1935*	6,342,000	439,000,000	69.22

*Estimated.

These figures show the population increase of the state to be almost trebled over 1910 and also show the tax capita to be trebled. While in 1910 there was a tax of $23.96 per person in the state, the estimated per capita tax in 1935 is given at $69.22.

Every taxpayer should study these figures closely and see the increase every year until now it is said that the total estimated tax for 1935 will be $439,000,000 with Federal taxes for 1934 $151,900,000, making the total tax bill for the people of California for 1935 $590,900,000.

Take into comparison the total value of important raw material in 1933, the last figures available, this shows from five principal commodities the total value is still more than one hundred twenty-five millions short of equaling the amount to be needed as taxes for conducting our state, county and city governments.

The following totals show the State and Federal total taxation and comparison therewith of the value of California products:

Tot. Sta. Tax ('35-est.)	$439,000,000
Total Fed. Tax (1934)	151,900,000
	$590,900,000

Value of Raw Maerials (1933—Last year available):

Petroleum	$143,064,000
Other Min.	63,420,000
Cit. Fruits	49,943,000
Or. Crops	103,124,000
Field Cr.	106,330,000
	$465,881,000
DEFICIT in value to meet total tax bill	$125,019,000

The 1933-34 totals are preliminary while all the figures for 1935 are estimated. Special assessment districts were included where the data was available.

Mark L. Requa of Santa Barbara in sending out this report asks:

"It would be interesting to determine if the Press and the people of California have the "guts" to find the truth and go thru with it, unpalatable as it may be, or whether we are "Chinafied" (that word comes from Theodore Roosevelt) and are going to sit idly by and take it lying down rather than fighting it out standing up. It is certain that unless something is done to control mounting taxation we shall see a flight of Capital from California, and the industrial and agricultural activities of the State will stagnate.

"I suggest that you, jointly, in cooperation with your Executive Committees, select a group of citizens free of partisan politics and innocent of political ambition, and that the members of such a committee formulate a program to check the mounting tax burden and propose such legislation as is necessary to accomplish the desired result. That this proposal be submitted to the Legislature (ask the Governor to call an extra session, if necessary, to consider the report) and in the event of the Legislature's refusing to act that the matter be taken directly to the people by an initiative.

"If the Press of California and the California State Chamber of Commerce will back up this proposal and the right kind of a committee is appointed the people of the State will, I hope, subscribe enough money to make it possible for the committee to carry on a real investigation.

"We must come to an entirely new conception of taxation based upon the ability of the people to pay. The total income of the people of the State of California and the safe proportion of that income to be taken for taxes must be ascertaned and thereafter not exceeded.

"For years we have talked a lot about debts and taxation, but have not halted the constantly mounting burden. There has been no adequately worked out detailed investigation; there has been no plan with the stamp of approval of many organizations. We have tackled the job piecemeal; the attempted control has been unsatisfactory.

"The task is one that will require months to complete and will involve a large expenditure of money, but it is the most important single undertaking that confronts the people of California."

Dr. E. L. Hardy Forum Speaker Tuesday

The Forum speaker at the Ocean Beach Town Hall meeting next Tuesday evening will be Dr. Edward L. Hardy, president of San Diego State College whose subject will be "What Is Next?".

Dr. Hardy is an educator of prominence and has a message well worth while for every adult to hear. A good attendance is desired and everyone invited.

Special music will start the evening program at 7:30, the address to begin at 8 p. m.

These town hall forums are financed by the Federal government and operated under the adult education program of the San Diego city school system. Their object is to bring the people together to discuss social and civic problems of the day.

Youth And The Townsend Plan

By John G. Thomson

(In San Diego Herald)

Countless thousands of young men—aye, and young women, too,—tramping the highways of America, hitch-hiking from town to town in search of work, far from their loved ones, tempted on every hand by the forces of evil, bitterness in their hearts. Countless mothers throughout this broad land crying themselves to sleep night after night, the victims of despair, praying to an inscrutable God to guard these wanderers and bring them safely home.

Countless thousands of mature men, unemployed and hopeless, gaunt hunger and despair staring from hollow eyes, slouching about our streets, dependent upon a miserable "dole"—men from whom all hope has fled.

Countless outcasts without a trace of self respect—men who started out in life with all the bright hopes and ambitions of youth—and who have, through no fault of their own, landed in the gutter.

Countless thousands of married men tramping from city to city in search of work, eating their very hearts out for a sight of wife and children. Millions of children crying for their daddy who "went away." Millions of wives broken in health and racked with worry. Other millions of fathers returning to their pitiful homes night after night with empty stomachs and empty pockets their very manhood sapped from them as they hear the crys of hungry babes and sobs of weary mothers.

Countless thousands of young men, bitterness in their hearts, giving up the uneven struggle against economic conditions and drifting into crime.

Countless millions of young men and women compelled to resist the natural urges of their hearts and bodies, unable to marry. Countless numbers of them, unable to resist the compelling urge of nature, driven to promiscous intercourse, disease and death and pious hypocrites holding up their hands in horror and denouncing "modern youth."

Countless thousands of desperate men, in whom the last spark of a once fervent patriotism has been extinguished, with bloody revolt in their hearts. Countless thousands, their patriotism tottering, ready to listen to them.

The foregoing statements are facts. No nightmare dreams are they, but conditions which exist in America today.

It is useless to ape the ostrich and bury our heads in the sand and try to fool ourselves into the belief that things are not bad as they seem to be.

The government has recognized the crisis. But all the governmental schemes in force today, while helping much, merely scratch the surface. The Old Age pension scheme put forward by the administration is laughable were it not tragically inadequate.

The Townsend Plan is the only plan conceived that will restore this country's prosperity and give back to youth its rightful heritage. By retiring millions of elderly people it will give jobs to millions of young people; by putting millions of dollars into circulation every month it will create new jobs. Unemployment will become a thing of the past. Countless homes will once more resound with happy laughter, and men and women will again raise their eyes from the gutter and feel that it is good to be alive.

The aged are not the only ones who will benefit, as Townsend plan opponents assert. The whole country will benefit if this great humanitarian plan is adopted. It must be adopted if we do not wish to see America perish.

Point Loma High School Play "Rivals" Billed April 11-12

On the evenings of April 11th and 12th, the Point Loma high school drama club will present Sheridan's "Rivals" in the high school auditorium under direction of Emory Shepherd with the following cast:

Clement Gage and Stuart Fraser as Sir Anthony Absolute.

Charles Rotzler and Lloyd Williams as Captain Absolute.

Alvis Isom as Faulkland.

George Duffy as Sir Lucius O'Trigger.

Harry Le Barron and Frank Haigler as Bob Aires.

Milton Stewart and Luther Chandler as Fag.

Victor Winn as David and Thomas.

Barbara Healy and Patty Lohman as Mrs. Malaprop.

Jane Clark and Bernice Bostick as Lydia Languish.

Margaret Cooper and Edith Jones as Julia.

Lyone Stratton and Eleanore Frederick as Lucy.

The costumes of the period of 1775 will comprise wigs, breeches, waistcoats, buckles, and cockades contrived by the stage costume department under the management of Marie Neiswinder, Phyllis Woodsworth and Rose Murphy.

Under the direction of Miss WillaB Brodie, art instructor, the art students have designed a round, revolving dais one foot high upon one half of which each scene will be played. While scene A is in use on one half of this revolving dias, scene B is being set up on the other half, which, at the end of scene A, revolves to bring B into use and allow the stage crew to strike A and reset the dias for C, etc. This will be the first use of a revolving stage at Point Loma High or at any high school performance in the city.

All the furniture, as well as the dais has been designed by the art students and built by the stage crew under the management of Ernest P. Silva, head carpenter.

A dry brush drawing of an old San Diego home at Sixth avenue and Beech street by WillaB Brodie, art instructor at Point Loma High school, has been awarded honorable mention in a recent exhibit shown in New York City by the New York College Art association, according to information in the gallery reviews of a recent copy of Parnassus.

Miss Brodie's drawing of the unique old San Diego house was included in the San Diego State College exhibition shown some time ago at the local Fine Arts gallery, sent east for the third biennial exhibition of student work shown at the art galleries of the Squibb building in New York City, and now with that exhibition on tour of important colleges and universities in the east.

After special study at the Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago, then under Everett Gee Jackson at San Diego State College, Miss Brodie has been teaching art since last September at Point Loma High school.

In the ninth exhibit of the Art guild in Balboa park last November Miss Brodie had an oil, "Matilija Poppies", and a pastel, "The Gangster's Moll". In the selection of student work recently shown in New York City by the New York College Art associaton there were entries from many colleges and universities such as Yale and Harvard. In the selection of student work sent east to this exhibit from San Diego State college by Everett Gee Jackson, Miss Brodie's dry brush drawing of the tall old San Diego home was one of two San Diego pictures to place, according to the notes in Parnassus.

The new unit of the R. O. T. C. at Point Loma High is making splendid progress and is working now toward the Federal inspection to be held on April 11 by the U. S. Government with Lieut. Col. J. W. Company G now has an enrollment of fifty-eight members. The following are those who have received promotion: John Canoose, first lieutenant; Richard Shutes, second lieutenant, in command of the recruits. The following are corporals: Charles L. Allen, Amory Cutet, Harold Fernardes, William Graham, Fred Hage, Austin Hartvigsen, Jess Macbeth, Rodney Maurer, Robert Rockwell. The following are privates, first class: Bob Brennan, Frank Haigler, Ralph Kinnings, Roland Peebles, Jack Reich, Geoffrey Rothero and Arthur Tipp.

The Health Play given last week Thursday and Friday in the school auditorium was certainly more than a little successful due to the combined efforts of Miss Hall, school nurse, and Mr. Shepherd of the drama department. Written by student assistants in the nurse's office at Woodrow Wilson Junior high school under the direction of Miss Eva Karisek and Miss Brodie the two scenes contrasting health conditions in the London of 1100 and in a modern American city were suited to the clear and interesting interpretation our Loma students gave it. We are indebted to Woodrow Wilson school for the use of their play and to the following Loman cast for its presentation:

Under Mr. Shepherd's direction, with Ethel Fried as student assistant; Marie Neiswender in charge of costumes; the stage craft class efficient as usual, this quickly prepared auditorium program was one of the best of the year.

XEMO Radio Program Good Publicity

Ocean Beach's first radio program over XEMO last Friday morning was well received generally and will bring to us a good deal of publicity in quarters where Ocean Beach previously has been unknown.

XEMO is one of the powerful stations of this section and will tell local people to patronize their sponsors as well as to send out generally fine information about the healthful advantages which may be found here on he west slope of Point Loma.

Local sponsors of this program will be announced again today, Friday, at 3 to 3:30 p. m. They are Richley Hardware, Kraft's Drug Store, Silver Spray Apt. Hotel and Plunge, Fried's Department Store, Bert W. Wenrich, real estate, Strand Radio Co., Sunset Cliffs Service Station & Garage, Ocean Beach Cleaners, Elenia's Beauty Shop, Hotel Ocean Village.

Included with this radio publicity will be an evening broadcast over KFJR at Portland, Oregon, one of the northwest's most powerful stations, giving a complete description of Ocean Beach and our advantages.

The Ocean Beach Floral association will hold a meeting tonight, Friday at 7:30, in the small front room at the civic center building. Those interested in a flower show to be held May 18 and 19 are requested to be present.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

TREASURY DEPARTMENT PLANS WOULD READJUST CURRENCY STRUCTURE OF NATION.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU revealed plans to dip into profits from gold seizure to retire $674,625,630 of the national debt through the use of gold certificates. Potentially inflationary, it will deprive national banks of the power to issue currency and save the government an annual interest charge of $13,500,000. Questions on inflationary implications were avoided by treasury officials, but they admitted the plan would "put gold back to work which can be expanded."

Secretary Morgenthau

The maneuver will place in the hands of the federal reserve banks $674,625,630 of gold certificates, which must be used as backing for issue of the same sum in federal reserve notes to retire the bonds. Note issue against the bonds could be expanded if currency demands warranted, to about $1,687,500,000, since a federal reserve note need not be backed by more than 40 per cent gold or gold certificates in like percentage. What will happen will be the immediate simplification of our currency system. The treasury and federal reserve banks will have all the authority to issue money. The plan involves retirement on August 1 of $674,625,630 of 2 per cent federal securities and substitution of federal reserve notes for $657,937,080 of outstanding national bank currency. These bonds will be retired with surplus funds created by devaluing the Roosevelt dollar from 100 cents to 59.06 cents, gold. The total profit was $2,812,000,000.

National bank notes issued by national banks against federal securities represent more than one-tenth of the nation's circulating currency. The administration's program likely means the permanent abandonment of the national bank note which has been used since the Civil war. The circulation privileges expire on all bonds deposited by banks and held in trust by the treasury on July 22, 1935, except on two issues. By calling for redemption the treasury will retire all securities bearing "circulation privilege" and national banks will no longer have suitable security for issuance of their own notes.

THE Mendieta administration in Cuba has established a military dictatorship over the island, constitutional law has been suspended, the death penalty for rebels imposed, and military governors designated for Havana and provinces. Washington is watching the situation with keen interest. Bombings and rioting are increasing, according to reports, with ten dead and fifteen injured. The objectives of the opponents of the government is the removal from office of President Mendieta and Colonel Fulgencio Batista, chief of the army. The strike has become almost general, nearly paralyzing all activities in the island. Repressive measures taken by the government to quell the strikers strongly resemble the strong-arm methods prevalent in the Machado regime, according to observers.

THE senate passed the army appropriation bill, and it now goes to the house. The measure adds $20,000,000 to the original bill, making the total appropriation of $400,000,000 almost a record high, and will add 46,250 to our army strength, making the total of enlisted men 165,000. Warm talk flowed freely as the senate debated the measure. Senator Lewis said that conflict might come between Russia and Japan and he asked: "With the army of Russia and the navy of Japan, where do we stand?" Senator McAdoo also speaking in favor of the bill said:

"Unless we want to continue to be a boob nation, we will not hesitate to make this increase in the army. It is justified by the wisdom and the necessities of national defense."

THREE Illinois farmers refused to tell the government census takers how much their farms were worth and how heavily they were mortgaged, claiming such information was none of the government's business. The trio were arrested and held for a grand jury, charged with violating the census act.

THE $4,880,000,000 relief bill was again returned to the senate marked "Rush!" There was no rush. Reports were that enough senators who had voted for the prevailing wage clause had been won over to the administration views to insure passage, but the bill, as revised by the committee, did not come up. Senator Long's one man filibuster, the army bill, and other matters claimed the attention of the august senators, and the fight was delayed. Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, said 20,500,000 persons were on relief, but expressed the belief that employment was increasing. He explained the apparent discrepancy by adding that many persons who had hitherto taken care of themselves have finally exhausted their resources. As the relief measure faced the start of its sixth week of debate, Long threatened fresh delays by trying to force a senate test of his proposed investigation of Farley, and administration leaders prepared to resort to drastic measures if the Kingfish attempts to hold the floor by "trying" his case in the senate after the adverse committee report. Senator Glass, chairman of the appropriations committee, is prepared to ask for early action on his amendment to the senate rules to prohibit a senator from talking on extraneous matters while an appropriation bill is pending.

AFTER twenty months of bargaining, the documents conveying full title to the Chinese Eastern railway to Manchukuo were initialed in Tokyo, thus eliminating Russia as a factor in Manchukuo. The written approval of the agreements was signed by Koki Hirota, Japanese foreign minister; Dr. Constantine Youreneff, Soviet ambassador to Japan; and by Gen. Ting Shih-Yuan, Manchukuoan minister of finance. The consideration was 140,000,000 yen, or about $39,300,000. The documents require that all three governments approve them before their formal signing about March 23. Thus is ended forty years of Russo-Japanese contention for domination.

A NEW gold suit is menacing administration financing and money policies. The suit reopening the question of investors' claims for payment of 1,800 million dollars of government bonds in gold or an equivalent, is brought by Robert A. Taft, son of the late chief justice, over the sum of $1.07. Taft demands either payment of bonds in gold or suspension of all refunding of the gold clause certificates. Before going to court, Taft presented to the treasury a $50 gold clause Liberty bond and four $1.07 interest coupons attached, and demanded gold for both, but was refused. The suit may force the administration to close the loopholes left by the Supreme court decisions, if that is possible.

THAT "ancient repository of dignity," the senate, has been treated to an exhibition of personalities, vituperation, barely avoided fistic encounters, and general uproar centering about Senator Long that should set a record for even that august body. Goaded into action by the almost daily tirades of Louisiana's Kingfish, majority leader, Joe Robinson of Arkansas arose white with rage and let loose a castigation designed to blast the irrepressible Long into submission. Robinson appealed to the senate to assert itself and put Long, whom he called "a madman," in his place. Vice President Garner and more than a dozen senators shook hands with Robinson when he closed, and galleries applauded until the chair threatened to clear them. It had no perceptible effect on Long other than to cause him to rush back to the senate chamber, and renew his attack on Robinson.

Senator Robinson

The next day Huey precipitated another verbal free-for-all when he resumed his one-man campaign against Postmaster General Farley and the New Deal in general. Long charged that Farley was instrumental in quashing an indictment against a bank in which Norman Davis, "ambassador at large," was interested. For his trouble Kingfish received a liberal supply of ridicule. He also sent to the senate post office committee a letter in which the accusation was made that Farley is "profiting" from 25 business concerns in New York city, involving violation of four criminal statutes. When questioned, Farley said he had no statement to make.

Long's uncomplimentary remarks about Farley generally came to naught, as the post offices and post roads committee blocked the Kingfish holding that "he had not produced facts or evidence constituting a proper case for investigation."

THE bill to repeal the pink slip publicity provision of the 1934 income tax law passed the house by a large majority of 302 to 98. The resolution apparently will win in the senate where a poll has shown it will be adopted by a close vote. Sentiment for repeal of the "snooper" clause has been growing, and there is no indication that the President will oppose the measure.

THE Greek revolt has been crushed, according to government reports, and preparations are being made for an attack on the island of Crete, held by former Premier Venizelos, leader of the insurrection. General Kondylis, in charge of army operations in Macedonia, was reported returning to Athens, after routing the rebels from their principal strongholds in Macedonia. It has been indicated that Venizelos has accepted defeat in Macedonia and Thrace and will proclaim Crete a separate state.

BY A vote of 23 to 1 the house ways and means committee approved the Vinson bonus bill, and gave the rival Patman bill a possible edge. The committee instructed Chairman Doughton to ask a wide open rule permitting inflationists to move the Patman measure as a substitute on the floor. Patman supporters claim the house will pass the first bonus bill brought up, but conservatives are working to jockey the "printing press money" measure out of preferred position. The Vinson bill is favored by the American Legion.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, jurist, scholar, soldier and gentleman, is dead. Two days before his ninety-fourth birthday, the beloved "great dissenter" succumbed to the ravages of pneumonia. The next day in the somber Supreme court chamber, the court led by Chief Justice Hughes paid tribute to the man whose career, he said, had been one of "unique distinction." Justice Hughes' voice choked as he spoke. The grind of legislation and the disputes of the day were forgotten in congress as both house and senate paused while glowing words were said in memory of the retired justice. Funeral services were held in Washington, attended by the President and Mrs Roosevelt, and members of the Supreme court. After the ceremony, Holmes was given military burial in Arlington National cemetery, as befitted one who had served his nation so gallantly. Justice Holmes was born in Boston, the son of the noted American poet of the same name. He entered Harvard and was in his senior year when the Civil war began. He enlisted as a lieutenant, was promoted to a captaincy and retired with the rank of colonel. He was wounded three times. After the war he returned to school and obtained his law degree. In 1882, Holmes was elevated to the Supreme court of Massachusetts, and in 1902, President Roosevelt appointed him to the United States Supreme court. On October 4, 1928, when he was eighty-seven years old, he became the oldest man ever to sit on the bench of the Supreme court. He retired in January, 1932.

Oliver W. Holmes

SENATE administration leaders have decided to virtually abolish NRA when it expires in June, and set up in its place a plan of self-government in business, eliminating present coercive measures, and giving over administrative functions of the new program to the federal trade commission. Thus would end one of the administration's most spectacular and far-reaching experiments. In its general form, the plan calls for permission to join in voluntary codes regulating trade practices and eliminating unfair competition. Price fixing will be outlawed. Business and industry will agree to minimum wages and maximum hours, and only when these standards are violated, can the government apply compulsory codes.

At the same time United States District Judge W. G. Borah, in New Orleans, denied a government petition to compel a box manufacturer to comply with the maximum hour and minimum wage provisions of the lumber code, ruling that the national industrial recovery act is unconstitutional. The ruling is expected to bring before the United States Supreme court the constitutionality of the interstate commerce clause of the lumber code.

KOKI HIROTA, Japanese foreign minister, sees in the dispute over settlement of Japanese farmers in Arizona, a spark which may ignite flames of discontent and cause regrettable consequences between Japan and the United States, he told the lower house of the Japanese diet. He expressed extreme regret that American authorities had not been able to settle the matter, and said he was pressing for an early solution. Exclusion of the Japanese has been asked under the alien land ownership law, and it is probable that no fundamental solution can be arrived at until the exclusion clause of the immigration act, which has been hanging fire since 1924 has been settled.

S. CLAY WILLIAMS, head of the NRA, tendered his resignation to the President, starting what is expected to be a wholesale housecleaning of the recovery administration's high command. Chairman Williams explained his action by saying that he had to return to his job as head of one of the country's largest tobacco companies. Three of the four remaining members of the board, Arthur D. Whiteside, Walton Hamilton, and Sidney Hillman, are known to have their resignations ready. Rumors say that the President will not fill the vacancies, but will return the NRA to a one-man command.

MONEY markets of the world reacted violently after President Roosevelt declared his administration would seek further jacking up of commodity prices. Stocks rallied in New York, government bonds sagged, and the falling British pound rose four cents. The President hurriedly issued another statement explaining that his advocacy of higher prices did not mean further devaluation of the dollar, at least not for the present. The first statement was made by the President at a press conference when he was asked if he believed prices had now risen sufficiently to warrant stabilization. He replied that they had not; that they were still too low in relation to debts.

Army Presses Forward to Crush Rebels

Troops Capture Town After Battle in Mud

Scenes such as this took place in Athens when insurrectionists attempted to overthrow the Greek government. The rebels under the alleged leadership of ex-Premier Venizelos were reported to have suffered heavy losses in engagements with loyalist troops.

The Greek government reported that they had recaptured the town of Seres, northeast of Saloniki, after a hard fight, and were pressing forward to crush the last vestiges of the rebellion. A heavy artillery bombardment drove the insurgents from their positions with heavy losses, it is said.

Tension increased in Europe as Bulgaria and Turkey massed troops on their frontiers, although they insisted their action was only as a protective measure. Turkey has 80,000 men stationed near the Greek and Bulgarian boundaries, and preparations have been going on for more than a month, it is said. France has ordered a destroyer to proceed to Athens to protect French property, and Great Britain has also ordered a battleship to speed to Phaleron bay.

Venizelos is reported as ready to flee from Crete, headquarters of the revolutionists, and seek refuge in Alexandria, Egypt, and the Jugoslavia government has acceded to a request of Greek authorities to hold Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, veteran Greek revolutionary leader, if he should attempt to cross into Greece by way of the Jugoslavia frontier.

PWA SCHOOLS

Ten Millions Spent in 38 States, Ickes Reports.

Washington.—More than $10,000,000 worth of school buildings have been completed in 38 states with the aid of PWA loans and grants, Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced. Hundreds of additional school are being constructed and will be ready for occupation by fall. Ickes said this program was woefully inadequate. He held out hope for approval of a $630,000,000 school building program this year, if congress approves the President's work-relief program.

Champions, and real ones! Each one is six feet two inches in height, and can they fell trees! They are: Miss Ruth Hoerschgen (left) and Miss June de Graff (right), both of Cataldo, Idaho. They were pictured after they had won the "Lady Lumberjacks" championship at Dalles, Ore., by felling a sixteen-inch tree in 1 minute 50 seconds. The girls undercut the tree with an ax, and then felled it with a crosscut saw. Their feat further disproves the old term of the "weaker sex" and the ancient's contention about "woman's place is in the home."

By WINNIE LIGHTNER
Actress

"SUDDEN gusts of wind are dreadful to me," confessed Winnie Lightner. "They bring to me the ghost of a man who was always fleeing from the wind, a man who one night, in the middle of a vaudeville skit, confessed to me that he was a murderer.

"From the day this man, who was called 'Sloe,' joined our company, gusts of wind seemed to sweep across the theater whenever our company played.

"This man had a habit of entering doors suddenly, as though he had come on a run—propelled by a power greater than himself—and of slamming doors behind him so that windows rattled.

"We always knew when he arrived through the stage entrance because of the slamming of doors and a rush of air which seemed to sweep across the stage and to rush down the halls and through the dressing rooms.

"He never left a door open behind him. It seemed that, almost without his help, doors slammed behind him. People in the company who crossed his path declared that he seemed always to walk in a wind; and that when he would rush away from them, they all agreed that the wind would seem to die away as if it followed him, and that, moreover, the sweet odor which seemed to fill the wind which followed him would die out, too.

"Every one around him grew to dread and fear his presence.

"One night, when he was to give one of the poor little lines against which I was to crack my silly little jokes and smart comment, I was suddenly terrified at his intensity.

"He was to say, 'You wouldn't go back on a chap like me, would you?'

"Instead, a sudden swish of air filled with a strange unpleasantly sweet odor blew across the stage, he shuddered and, brandishing his arms before me, cried in terror-stricken tones:

"'You wouldn't go back on a murderer like me, would you?'

"Then he flew off the stage with a great slamming of doors and the rattling of stage fixtures.

"I don't know what comments I made on the stage. I was completely baffled until a few hours later, when the police telephoned me to say that a man who worked in my company had killed himself, and that I should come to identify the body.

"Sloe had made a full confession. It seems he had killed his young wife in a sudden burst of fury over some trifle and had buried her in the garden of their small home on the outskirts of an Illinois town. He then fled. No one had missed them, because they were a strange couple, who made no friends.

"After his confession they found her grave. Across their little garden, police reported, was a wide row where the trees and the lilac bushes and the grass were pressed flat toward the east, as though a great and continuous wind had been blowing across that place for many days and nights.

"The thing that impressed me about his confession was the final sentence. It read: 'The wind blew all night.'

"That's why I don't like to hear the wind at night. Can you blame me?"

LAWSON ROBERTSON remembers a weird and ghostly happening at a motor cycle race in 1912.

"The night before the race," he narrated, "the racers met at Brighton Beach, N. Y. They had come from all parts of the country. There was a circuit of motor cycle racetracks—one in Buffalo, one in Brooklyn, St. Louis and Newark. The men met at Brighton Beach for a jolly get-together dinner before their race in Newark.

"Before the dinner Arthur Chappell lit a match, gave it to John Albright to light his cigarette, then to Eddie Hasha to light his and then raised the same match to his own cigarette.

"He jumped from his chair so abruptly that he startled every one around him.

"'I lit three cigarettes on one match,' he exclaimed. 'I'd give anything not to have done that.'

During the race something went wrong with Albright's motor cycle and Albright, Hasha and six spectators were killed.

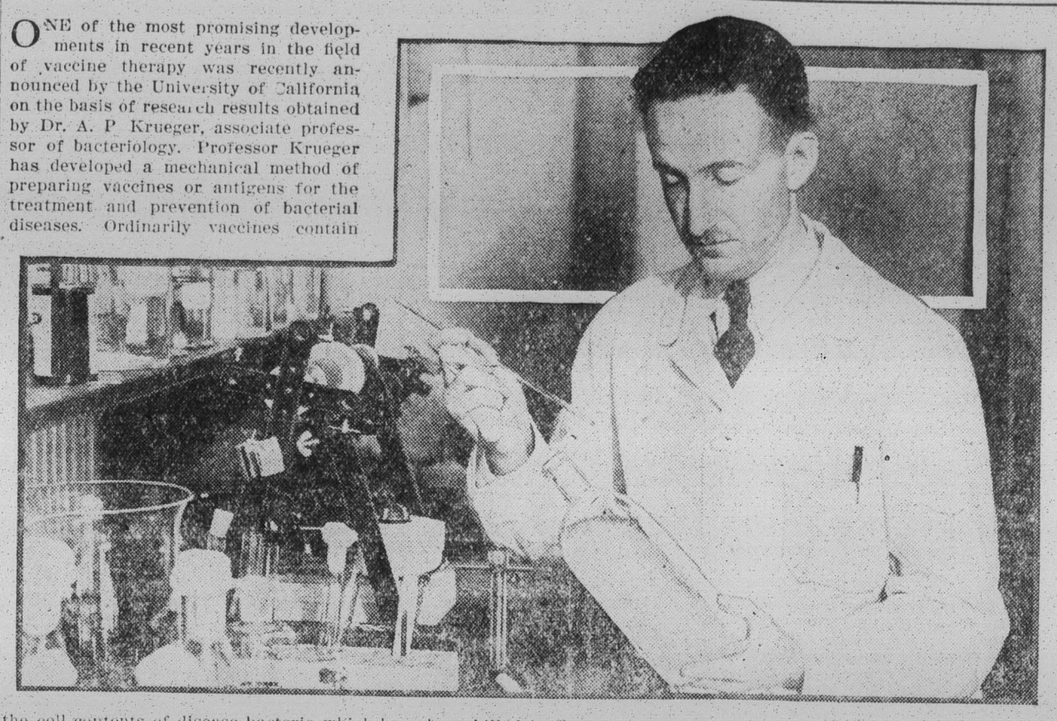
Menus Are Endless

The menus in French are endless; the variety is overwhelming. The basic foodstuffs are abundant in this land. It is simply a matter of knowing how. And savoir faire applies to your French chef. He takes such a lowly worm as a snail, or such a croaking amphibian as a frog, or such a slimy snake as an eel, and delivers a plat de resistance that makes your mouth water.

Plan Carefully

When having electricity put into the home, have fixtures placed with a view to a combination of service and attractive arrangement. So often the general effect of a room is lovely, but when one desires to read or sew it is next to impossible to obtain a good light for these purposes.

Develops New Vaccine for Bacterial Diseases



ONE of the most promising developments in recent years in the field of vaccine therapy was recently announced by the University of California on the basis of research results obtained by Dr. A. P Krueger, associate professor of bacteriology. Professor Krueger has developed a mechanical method of preparing vaccines or antigens for the treatment and prevention of bacterial diseases. Ordinarily vaccines contain the cell contents of disease bacteria which have been killed by heat or chemicals. It is Doctor Krueger's conclusion that the consistent failure of many of these preparations is due to alterations in the protein of the bacteria induced by the heat or chemicals used to kill hem. To eliminate this undesirable reaction he has perfected a mill, consisting of a cylinder containing several thousand stainless-steel ball bearings which kills bacteria without denaturation of the protein within them. The effectiveness of this method of preparing vaccines has been clearly demonstrated in the treatment of whooping cough and of sinus infections. During a recent epidemic of whooping cough 232 children were treated with the Krueger vaccine and 165 with another type of vaccine. Only 47 per cent of the children receiving the old type of vaccine showed fair or good results, while the Krueger pertussis antigen, as it is called, brought about good or fair results in 90 per cent of the cases. Tests of the similarly prepared antigen for sinus infections have brought about cures or satisfactory improvement in 90 per cent or more of three series of 45, 62 and 50 cases. Next Doctor Krueger will test the new type antigen on common colds.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE IS IN A TIGHT PLACE

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE was having a good time on the bank of the Smiling Pool. He laughed at Grandfather Frog's fear that he was taking a foolish risk. It was true that he was a long way from home with its many secret hiding places which made it comparatively safe in times of danger. But Danny wasn't worrying. As he had told Grandfather Frog, he doesn't believe in worrying until there is something to worry about.

So, this being the first time he had visited the Smiling Pool for a long time, he made the most of it. One of the first things he did was to get a good long drink. You see, there had been no rain for a long time, and Danny had had hard work to keep from being thirsty most of the time. Then he asked Grandfather Frog for all the news of the Smiling Pool—how his big cousin, Jerry Muskrat, was getting on; what Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter and Spotty and Turtle had been doing; how large a family Mr. and Mrs. Redwing had raised, and if Rattles the Kingfisher still came fishing every day in the smiling pool?

He Was Headed Straight for the Spot Where Danny Meadow Mouse Was Napping.

Grandfather Frog answered all his questions and then declared that he had talked enough for one morning. Finding that Grandfather Frog really meant what he said, Danny first hunted for something to eat, and then finding a comfortable place on the bank of the Smiling Pool, decided to take a nap.

Now just by chance, that very morning Reddy Fox decided that he, too, would visit the Smiling Pool. Reddy likes a tender young frog for a change in his bill of fare once in a while. So about the time Danny Meadow Mouse decided to take a nap Reddy Fox started toward the Smiling Pool. As he drew near it he crouched low in the grass and stole forward very carefully and stealthily, doing his best to keep as much out of sight as possible. Nearer and nearer he crept to the bank of the Smiling Pool, and it just happened that he was headed straight for the spot where Danny Meadow Mouse was napping.

Now Reddy wasn't thinking of Danny Meadow Mouse. He was thinking of young frogs. But as he drew near the bank of the Smiling Pool a careless Merry Little Breeze brought to him the scent of Danny Meadow Mouse. It tickled Reddy's nose. It made him forget young frogs. A fat meadow mouse would be much better eating than a young frog.

Reddy became more careful than ever. He crept along almost on his stomach in the direction from which that scent came. All the time Danny Meadow Mouse was having pleasant dreams in that comfortable place on the banks of the Smiling Pool, wholly unconscious that danger was anywhere near.

IN HER sweet eyes there is the look of one
Who has said many prayers, so soft and true
Is her expression . . . Golden as the sun
Is her young heart . . . Her hands have learned to do
For others early . . . Baby brother turns
To her for kisses and a healing phrase.
Scarce more than child herself, her patience earns
Her mother's gratitude, her father's praise.

For her, one of a family of ten,
There is no time for selfish thoughts or dreams.
The morning dawns. Her toil begins again.
The busy hours advance; the first star gleams,
And evening comes, with rest for a tired saint,
Whose day has passed with no word of complaint.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

FOR THE BUSY HOUSEKEEPER

IN MANY homes fresh cookies are so much more enjoyed than a large amount baked at one time. Here is the ice-box cooky which may be kept many days and when a tin of fresh cookies is wanted, slice off a few, put them in the oven and bake them as brown as you like.

Ice-Box Cookies.

Take one cupful each of butter, brown and granulated sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful each of salt and soda, one cupful of nutmeats, one teaspoonful each of almond and vanilla extract and four and one-fourth cupfuls of flour. Cream the butter, add the sugar, eggs and other ingredients. Roll into two rolls and let stand on a cloth in a pan placed in the ice box. The cloth keeps the dough from flattening and sticking to the pan and thus losing its round shape. Slice very thin, decorate with half a nut meat, a raisin or cherry as one's taste suggests.

Another food so much liked in all our homes, is fresh rolls. It takes time to prepare a light and crisp roll. Here is a recipe which will keep for a week or longer in the ice chest and a pan of biscuits may be baked any time one cares to serve them:

Ice Box Rolls.

Dissolve two compressed yeast cakes in one-fourth of a cupful of warm water, adding two teaspoonfuls of sugar. Add two tablespoonfuls of shortening, one tablespoonful of salt, one-half cupful of sugar to a pint of boiling water. Beat two eggs and mix all together with four cupfuls of flour. Beat well, then add three and one-half cupfuls more of flour, mix well with a spoon but do not knead. Set away in the refrigerator until the next day at noon, when it will be ready to use. Handle the rolls quickly, brush with melted lard or sweet fat when they are placed in the pan. Let stand until more than double their bulk; keep covered while rising in a warm place.

With these two mixtures in the ice box, one may be ready for the unexpected and need not worry.

The owner of the chateau is desirous of selling it and anyone seeking one perfectly good prison can have it at a bargain.

BRITAIN MAKES SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF STORED FOOD

A scientific study of the transport and storage of fish, meat, fruit and vegetables has recently been completed by the British department of scientific and industrial research. In the study, designed to help British shippers and improve Great Britain's food supply, home-grown foods received consideration first, and then British empire and foreign produce.

Research demonstrated that fish, stored in crushed ice aboard trawlers may be kept in good condition from 10 to 12 days, where formerly the storage period was limited to five or seven days. It has been shown that herring, if frozen rapidly in brine and stored at low temperatures, will preserve their quality for as long as four months.

Co-operating with Australian and New Zealand packers, the investigators found that beef could be preserved in a chilled state for sixty to seventy days in an atmosphere containing 10 to 20 per cent of carbon dioxide. If ship's refrigerators can be made sufficiently gastight, this fact should enable Australia and New Zealand to ship beef to England "in chill." Bacon and other pork products, it was also shown, could be stored successfully in atmospheres highly charged with carbon dioxide. Low temperatures alone will not preserve bacon during a trip from Australia or New Zealand.

The storage of fruits in gas and at low temperatures has not yet been thoroughly explored, but the study records that the principle of gas storage is now valid beyond dispute.

PERHAPS A WOMAN FOR PRESIDENT

And now it begins to look as though in the not far distant future, we shall have a woman candidate for president and vice-president over the Federal family. This is not saying that they can be elected, but the candidacy seems quite probable. With the names of Judge Florence E. Allen of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, New York City, and Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, as potential candidates, the idea has taken a serious turn with plenty of popular backing. It might not be such a political joke as it seems, to mention it. Women of such brain efficiency as to have solved the economic problems in the home are certainly keen enough to play a part in politics during such economic stress and are amply capable of playing an important role in the executive halls of the state and nation.

This, perhaps, is enough to stir up all manner of argument, especially when it looks like women were taking the places of men in many lines of business, professional and political.

Judge Allen is the first woman in any country to receive a life appointment as judge in a court of general jurisdiction, and is also one of two women nationally prominent in the equal suffrage campaign to receive national public office in the United States. She is a maiden lady. Her legal knowledge, upright character and patriotic loyalty as a citizen qualifies her, without a doubt, to successfully occupy the president's chair.

If we are to get back to civilization where we belong, some will say, give the men their work and let women preside in the home. Men need jobs that will pay them enough to afford a home, a wife and children. Others argue that women need to be put back in the homes to rear their children.

It is true that no self-respecting young man wants to depend on a woman for his living. No woman wants a husband who can't even support himself. Consequently the moral standard is lowered and the race deteriorates.

It is said that, chemically, the materials of man's body is worth about 98 cents. That is a small value, but shows in weight how "cheap" we are. If we are to increase in worth we must do it ourselves and not depend upon the other fellow. But this is not a task! The ambition and will is the first real asset to a human being. Through these endowments we discover a lot of valuable action—it may be good or bad. A bad man is of no account in his present state, but there are unlimited possibilities in the former. A right choice in a vocation is essential, but we all need character and well directed energy. What men need today is a desire to study and exercise true judgment. This is sufficient to carry you over the worst depression ever known. The sublime secret in living is not selfishness and gain, but to know that you are doing your part, with the kingdom of life within you.

California leads, with an interest centered on juvenile delinquency, surprising the whole nation by the way it is governing the youth whose character building has been sadly neglected. There are over fifty cities already, that are well organized with co-ordinating councils, mapping delinquency areas and charting agencies to establish a thorough searching system. The California plan was recently recommended for adoption by the National conference on crime, held in Washington, D. C. Presently, and very soon, the children will be the world. They will be ministers and managers, directors and doctors, employees and employers. It will be theirs to say yea or nay to wars, strikes, riots, policies of trade, education and religion. We shall see what present-day parents have been teaching their children. What to morrow demands is what today has taught.

Every year we express the feeling that the worst is over; at the same time looking and hoping for that better day. We are reminded of those familiar lines, "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick." Then we wonder when will we ever get prosperous times again, when all are at work and the larder is filled with plenty? We naturally look to Congress, but, somehow, very little relief seems to come. The secret facts are known that the World War destroyed 40 billion dollars worth of property and humanity is busy at the job of trying to replace it, but the process will take years. We all know that the fight is not over.

Mary Pickford has wisely said that beauty is not a matter of lifting the face—it's a matter of lifting the thoughts. This favorite queen of the screen is an outstanding example which very few in her profession can excel. There is no doubt about her character as a noble woman. Her thoughts are high class, clean and righteous. She is a benefactor and intensely philanthropic in her living. She seeks friendship among the lowly and true, and those who confide in her need ever doubt her sincerity. If the screen today was built on her plane of living the theatre would be one of the greatest moral stimulants in the land.

Europe and Asia are both festering under threatening war troubles, which are at present augmented by Germany's intention to mobilize a half million men. Russia, with the world's largest army of nearly a million, claims that she is seeking only peace. Increasing the strength of its standing army and war equipment in recent years has not indicated a truly peaceable program. The entire force has been doubled, while the war budget has reached an unprecedented sum. It looks like the world peace pledge of nations is nothing more than a scrap of paper—torn into pieces.

Now that the Saar has been given over into the fatherhood of Germany there seems to be no further territorial claims to make of France; thus all feeling should now be amiable so far as Germany is concerned. We are not speaking for France, but with the settlement of the Saar, why not remove that old "chip off the shoulder?" There would be one less question to stand in the way of peace. If Europe is to ever purge herself of war, there are a lot of chips that are daring the other fellow to knock off.

DEFICIT FACES RELIEF COMMISSION BEFORE MAY

With 280,000 families to support on the unemployment relief rolls, besides special programs of the Federal government, Administrator Frank Y. McLaughlin estimated the cost until May 15 at more than $38,000,000 on the basis of present expenditures.

To meet this bill, the Commission has $9,000,000 from the Federal government and $24,000,000 from the state relief bond issue, a total of $33,000,000.

Hope of avoiding the deficit lies chiefly in reduction of the case load, to weed out relief recipients who can support themselves by other means, the Commission was advised by McLaughlin.

Unofficial estimates were that as high as 15 percent of the families receiving aid are not eligible for it, having other sources of income.

To discover unworthy cases, the Commission pondered four methods:

1. A simple statement of need by the relief client, putting him on official record that he realizes the penalty of falsification.
2. More careful study of doubtful families.
3. An adequate staff of trained social workers in the field.
4. An appeal to the public to aid in reporting "charity thieves."

Reduction in administrative costs was considered as another means of reducing the deficit.

The Commission agreed to avoid reducing family budgets below minimum, adequate living standards as a means of saving money.

SOLACE

Across the years we seek in vain
To still the ache of love's refrain,
To live again that joy we crave
Of the absent arms so sweetly brave.

To fill the void of hopeless years
That time has fraught with endless tears,
With grief so deep death must reap
Of those we love in parting sleep.

Give we must of all that's dear
E'en tho it leaves but scalding tears,
Time alone will bring a healing balm
To compensate the loss, with peaceful calm.

Toes And Tomatoes

THE serving of food requires diplomacy. It's so easy to tread on someone's toes, if one isn't careful. There's Uncle John you should have known doesn't eat cooked fruits—yet you served baked apple for dessert. There's the Jones family who doesn't eat meat on Friday—and you served that delicious big steak. Well, what can you be safe in serving when there are so many toes about, waiting to be trod on?

Try toma-toes. Keep on hand a list of delicious dishes made with tomatoes, for almost everyone likes them. Here are some suggestions for tomatoes in various courses of the meal:

A Puree and An Omelet

Tomato and Cauliflower Puree: Cook one medium head of cauliflower until tender. Press through a sieve. Press the contents of one No. 2 can of tomatoes through a sieve also, and add with the contents of one can of consomme and one cup of water to the cauliflower. Bring to boiling. Saute one tablespoon of minced onion in two tablespoons butter for a few minutes. Add three tablespoons flour, stir until smooth, thin with a little of the hot soup, and then add the remainder of the soup and cook until creamy. Season to taste with salt and pepper. This serves six persons.

Omelet with Macaroni and Tomato Sauce: Make a French-omelet with four eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, a few grains of pepper and four tablespoons milk. Meanwhile make a tomato sauce of one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour, salt and pepper to taste, one-half teaspoon sugar, three-fourths cup strained tomatoes and a few drops of onion juice. Add three-fourths cup of cooked macaroni, cut in one-inch pieces, and spread over half the omelet just before folding. This serves four persons liberally.*

Thinks Outdoor Pool Better Than Pier.

Editor, Ocean Beach News
Dear Sir:

Would you kindly publish the following in your valuable paper.

With regard to the question to the proposed pier in Ocean Beach, I would like to offer a timely suggestion.

It would appear that the amount of benefit derived from this undertaking would be very limited. It would not add to the beauty of such a nice beach.

Some time ago, a similar undertaking was carried out at Pacific Beach, which proved to be an eye-sore and a commercial failure.

Ocean Beach is so situated that good fishing can be had from Mission bay bridge.

What would be a real asset to the beach is an open-air swimming pool.

A plunge of this nature could be constructed where already a natural pool has been formed.

This would not detract from the beauty of the beach, and would give much pleasure to men, women and children with perfect safety.

An Ocean Beach resident.

FEBRUARY BEVERAGE TAX IS $93,619.97

Sacramento, March 25.—California taxes on beer and wine for February were $10,000 more than for January, but were only $1104.15 more than the corresponding taxes for February, 1934. Thus while January taxes marked a gain of ten per cent over those for the first month of last year, the assessments for February are only 1.2 per cent higher than for the corresponding month of 1934.

DEVOTIONS WITHOUT DISPLAY

Matthew 6—16-18

16. Moreover when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. 17. But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face; 18. That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

THE MODEL PRAYER

Matthew 6—9-15

9. After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. 10. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. 11. Give us this day our daily bread. 12. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. 13. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen. 14. For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: 15. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

Dr. de Purucker To Lecture Sunday

So great was the interest aroused by Dr. de Purucker's first public address on "Death—and Afterwards" given before a capacity audience at Point Loma, some weeks ago, that he has consented to deliver a second one on the same subject next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Special motor-coach service, for this lecture only, will be offered from the Union building, cor. of Broadway and Third ave, at 2:15 p. m. Sunday, returning at 5 p. m.

A key-thought in the Theosophical leader's previous lecture was the following: "If you want to know how you are going to feel when you die, at the moment of death, study the processes of falling asleep. So it is with death. It matters not how it comes: by age, by disease, by violence or by the crime of suicide. All men die that way, drop off to sleep as quickly as that and the instant of the close of the meeting, which will peace, of ineffable rest."

Maurice Braun, national director of Theosophical clubs and Mrs. Braun will be guests of the Ocean BeachTheosophical club in the formal opening of their new club rooms at 1940 Abbott street. At that time Mr. Braun will present the award which was won by the Ocean Beach publicity book.

Mrs. Mora Forbes will be the speaker of the evening and her subject will be "Working with Nature." Here is one thought from her message: "When a man acts aright he acts according to nature's laws: and that is the way to peace and harmony, because he acts with nature and runs not contrary to her own irresistible currents of evolution. When a man acts for himself alone, placing his puny, feeble, imperfect will against the strong current of nature's flooding river of evolutionary progress, he is swept aside on to some sandbank of destiny and must recover by his own efforts his former place in nature's advancing river of evolution. That is why we suffer."

All persons interested are most welcome and there will be an opportunity for the answering of questions.

Methodist Episcopal Services

Among the Scriptural selections are these verses from Luke: "And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into a synagogue and taught: and there was a man whose right hand was withered. And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation against him. But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose and stood forth. . . . And looking around about upon them all, he said unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, includes the statements: "If sin, sickness, and death were understood as nothingness, they would disappear. As vapor melts before the sun, so evil would vanish before the reality of good. One must hid the other. How important, then, to choose good as the reality!"

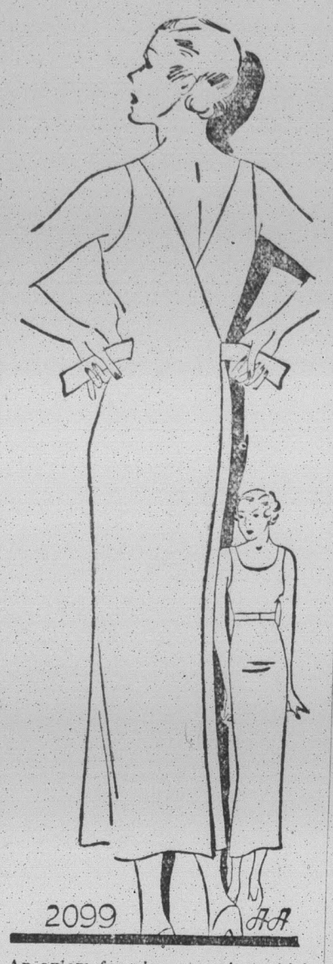
Slip That Assures Perfect Frock Fit

PATTERN 2099



An axiom for nice grooming which every well-dressed woman knows by heart is that no frock can fit any better than the slip that's worn beneath it. That's why it is so important to have an abundance of trim slips in your wardrobe. As you see by the illustration, this model wraps around at the back, and can be perfectly adjusted to the figure by the belt which fastens in front. Result: no bunchiness or wrinkles to spoil the lines of your smartest frocks! And the fact that the back skirt is double makes the slip shadow-proof and long-wearing as well! Washable silk-crepe or sateen or one of the tubbable rayon materials would make up well in this design.

Pattern 2099 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

—10—

The engine crew had been fussing with a suspected draw bar and did not enter the cook shanty until most of the others had left. Soon afterward the door opened again and Blackmore came in.

"How near are you ready to deliver?" he asked Elliott with a worried frown.

"As soon as the boys there stoke their own boilers!" Ben replied lightly.

"Sure you can make it?"

"As sure as a man can be."

"I sure hope so, Ben. Guess you know by now that I'm pulling for you in this scrap. But I've got to hold you to your contract. To the hour and letter of it. Your friend Brandon has wired into the house, it seems, offering any quantity of veneer stuff up to seventy thousand at ten dollars less than your contract calls for. Here's a wire,"—shaking a telegram—"ordering me to hold you to your agreement and if you're late or short on scale to have Brandon load tomorrow. It's out of my hands, you see."

Ben's mouth tightened.

"Well, it happens, we've ducked from under our genial friend Brandon again. Yeah. We'll whip-saw Mr. Nick Brandon!"

Blackmore grinned and unbuttoned his coat. He chuckled. He was glad. He was on Ben's side for certain, and as he lit his pipe and commenced to talk, with an easing in his manner, a triumphant sort of peace descended on the shanty.

But even as they visited, a slender figure, moving through the darkness with a slight limp, followed the Hoot Owl steel up the long grade that climbed from the siding. From the crest of this grade the steel pitched sharply northward into the narrow valley of the river where alders and willows showed black, now, against the snow on either side of the stream.

On the trestle this figure stood still a long interval, listening for sounds in the cold quiet. Then he dropped down the bank of the stream to where the crib work of the trestle stood, stoutly footed beneath the muck and water. For many minutes he was there, grunting occasionally, and when he climbed the bank again he trailed something carefully behind. . . . Across the bridge, now, he went, after more listening, and down again beneath the north end of the trestle. More grunting; pawings in the snow, hard prodding with a short steel bar. . . . And up again, trailing something carefully once more.

Next, the man lighted a cigarette, shielded the flame of the match in cupped hands and after the tobacco was burning applied the fire to a pair of other objects held tightly between thumb and forefinger. . . . He let them go and a pair of greenish sputters began crawling across the trestle . . . and the man was limping swiftly up the hill, over the crest, while the green sputters drew apart, one crossing the trestle toward its northernly end, the other moving in the opposite direction.

It was twenty minutes later. Ben Elliott was pulling on his mackinaw, preparatory to going out with the first three cars of logs, when he stopped suddenly, one arm in its sleeve, as a jolt shook the building, rattling dishes and causing the door of the range oven to drop open with a bang. None in the place spoke; they looked at each other, faces set in puzzlement. Again came a heavy jolt, a loud detonation, and a pan fell from its shelf with a crazy clatter. No word, still. Without speaking they leaped for the doorway and emerged to see the crew spilling from the men's shanty to look and listen.

"It's dinnymite!" Bird-Eye Blaine croaked hoarsely as he ran out. "Dinnymite fer sure! Where, Benny b'y?"—looking earnestly into Elliott's face.

"That's for us to find out" Ben answered grimly and they followed him as he ran with long strides toward the direction from which the sound had come, down the track to where it curved and dipped to the trestle which spanned the river.

Minutes later they came up to him, the fastest of them, as he stood motionless on the bank of the Hoot Owl, looking at the mass of twisted railroad steel and of ties that dangled from the swinging rails in ragged fringe; at the scattered remnants of crib work, at the piling standing splintered and awry and useless in the stream bed.

Ben Elliott's bridge was gone. His way to the siding with his veneer logs, on the delivery of which hung the fate of the operation, was blocked. No time remained to team them out, there was no other way to get them out except by steel. And his steel was broken, twisted, useless.

He turned to face them as they crowded up, swearing and exclaiming in excited voices.

"You, Houston!" he snapped to the camp's boss. "Get those standards off the main line. Bird-Eye, start a fire here. You men—you three there—get a fire going on the other bank. You teamsters, back to camp and dress your donkeys. Bring axes, peaveys, skidding equipment. Lively, now, everybody! A job of work coming up!"

Blackmore, whose wind was short, elbowed through the crowd, panting heavily.

"Good G—d, Elliott! They've scotched you!"

Ben gave him a fleeting, scorching glance.

"Scotched, h—l! They've only got me good and mad!"

And now began a scene the like of which had never been recorded in the Tincup country.

Men were there in numbers where huge bonfires, constantly tended that the light should be steady, flared on the banks of the Hoot Owl. Sawyers, cant-hook men, teamsters, toiled to reduce the wreckage of the trestle, shaking it out of the way, working hastily, noisily, excitement evident in their movements and shouts. Others cut brush until the sloping river banks showed bare and dark.

Back in the woods oil flares burned as the steam loader puffed and snorted and rattled, swung its boom, lifted logs from their banks, tossed them through the air and dropped them into place on a flat car. Once loaded, the car of logs and the jammer were trundled down the mile of track to the stream. Slow and slower the car moved until the boom of the loader overhung the gap where a trestle had been. Then blocks went into place to secure the wheels, Elliott gave the signal, the boom swung a half circle, hook men adjusted their tackle to a log on the single car; up it went, around and out over the river bank and then down.

Elliott was below there with his cant-hook men. They grabbed the first stick, wrestled it into place parallel with the current and others, with mauls and stakes, gave it a firm resting place on the bank. . . . Another log . . . another and still more, until a crude foundation for trestle abutment had been made.

It was difficult work; dangerous work, too, in the bad light. Intense cold handicapped the men, also, but they worked harder than they ever had worked on that job.

Ben encouraged, he flattered, he cajoled and he drove those men as they never had been driven before. They moved on a run when going from place to place; they seemed to try to outdo one another when strength became essential. They were infected with Elliott's fire.

Standing on the bank within the circle of firelight Dawn McManus seemed to snuggle close to Able Armitage, face pallid even under the ruddy glow of flames. Her eyes followed just one figure; that of Ben Elliott. Commanding, resourceful, a human dynamo, he was.

Shortly after midnight the supply team drove up from camp, the cook drew back blankets which had covered its burden, commenced putting generous pieces of steaming steak between slices of bread and the cook poured coffee from huge pots for the men who swarmed around the sleigh.

A team came creaking up from the siding, its sled laden with steel rails, fish plates, spikes and track-laying tools.

Back to the decks in the woods went the locomotive; down it came again, bearing more logs. These were let down to a pile which rose almost to the track level. When it was three feet higher nearly half the work would be finished.

Workers staggered through the snow bearing a steel rail. It went into place; fish plates clattered; wrenches set nuts and spikes put the rail secure on ties.

So when the locomotive, leaking steam from its old joints, lumbered down with its next burden, the loader was set out on this length of new track and began the task of filling in the far side of the ravine, leaving a sluiceway through which the waters of the steam gurgled and surged.

Blackmore joined Able and Dawn on the bank where the firelight struck topaz lights from the snow. The old justice turned an inquiring gaze on him and the buyer shrugged.

"Two o'clock," he muttered. "He's got less than six hours left to turn the trick."

"It doesn't seem humanly possible," Able said slowly.

"I'm beginning to think," Blackmore replied, "that the man isn't human. This thing would've stopped most men I know without a try. But not Elliott!"

Three o'clock, and the foundation on the south side of the river was in. Four, and the jammer was swinging logs rapidly into that gap. . . . Five, and the heads of men working doggedly on the southern crib were up to the level of the old ties.

Daybreak found them throwing the last load of logs into place and the pallid light of the early day revealed Elliott's face drawn and gaunt and colorless; his eyes burned brightly, strangely dark.

"His only chance is that the local'll be late," Blackmore moaned to Able.

Six o'clock, and broad axes shaped the logs on which ties would rest, and up from the siding came a team at a trot, and behind it another. These were men from Tincup who had heard of the work going on. They left their sleighs and looked at the emergency trestle and then stared at one another and shook their heads in amazement. Things like that just didn't happen, they seemed to be thinking.

Then came a battered cutter, with old Tim Jeffers driving alone, to see what was to be seen.

"Heard the shots in town last night," he told Able. "Come mornin' I drove this way."

The old justice nodded grimly.

"You guessed, then."

Tim spit angrily. "The lad was gettin' too close to his mark to suit some folks, it seems."

Seven o'clock, and men staggered up the embankment bearing a rail.

Her Eyes Followed Just One Figure: That of Ben Elliott.

Five minutes later it rang and sang as the spike went home, and another, the last, was brought up.

The gap was bridged, the last spikes were going in; the particular job was done, but tension screwed up and up, as a fiddle string is tightened. . . .

It was seven-thirty, and far off a locomotive screamed.

"The local!" Blackmore gasped. "She's at Dixon. . . . In a half hour, now. H—l, the boy's licked!"

A half hour! A half hour in which to move six standard cars laden with a heavy scale of saw logs over that grade! Two trips, Ben Elliott had estimated it would take. Two trips for the leaking old locomotive to drag them the three miles to the siding and puff its way back and trundle the other three over the hill and down the slope. It was a half mile climb from river to summit with a better than four per cent grade. A good locomotive of even small tonnage might take them over at once; but not the old ruin that stood sending its plume of smoke into the morning air up the track yonder. And if those logs were not put down for the train even now screaming its way toward the siding, Ben Elliott was beaten.

He straightened, flinging away his maul, saw the last nut tightened on the final fish plate and then, holding up both hands, face fixed toward the locomotive with its string of cars waiting around the bend and up the hill to the northward, he began to run.

Holding them there? When the trestle was ready? Men wondered why, audibly, excitedly, stirred from their weariness by this strange move. Instead of high-balling them on, Elliott was holding them back!

"Come on; we'll drive it!" a teamster cried and his sled at once swarmed with men as his horses started toward camp and the train at a heavy gallop.

CHAPTER VII

The cars of veneer logs were coupled, their air hoses dangling, because the Hoot Owl never boasted air brake for its trains. The locomotive panted asthmatically and leaking steam trailed off into the forest. McIver, the engineer, stood beside his cab, wiping his hands slowly on a ball of waste and his fireman hung out the gangway as Ben came running up.

"You'll have to take 'em . . . all over at once," Elliott panted. "Local'll be there in . . . fifteen minutes! If they're not at the siding in time for the local, we lose! You've got to run for it, Mac, and pick up enough speed going down to carry you over."

McIver rolled the waste and eyed his employer. Then he shook his head slowly.

"Tough luck for you!" he said. "But with that rotten steel on a cold mornin', and no telling what that trestle'll do when weight hits it . . ." He shook his head again and looked Elliott in the eye. "I got kids," he said simply. "So's the fireman."

Some of the irate glare which had been in Ben's face dwindled. He, too, stared briefly down the track.

"Kids, yes," he said softly. "I can't ask a man with kids to try it, Mac. No hard feelings. I'll take a shot myself."

Teams clinked up, then, horses frost covered. Ben surveyed the crowd that pressed about the engine and swung up to the step.

"I'm going to take her over myself," he said. "If I get across that hump, with this load pushing me, I'll need a brakeman. I'm not going to ask anyone of you to ride. Maybe we'll pile up. But if we do get to the top, I can't stop her alone at the mill. Without air, with frost on the steel, we'll go into the pond. There's fifty dollars in it for the man who'll ride with me!"

They looked hard at him, and then, almost in unison, their faces turned down the track. To watch was to know what was in their minds: the dangers of that curve, with rusty steel so cold; the problematical strength of the trestle they had built through the night.

"Fifty dollars . . . against a broken neck." Ben said and his voice trembled a bit. He drew his watch. "We've got eleven or twelve minutes to catch the local. . . . I'll urge no man. . . . Fifty dollars . . . and a long chance. Any takers?"

He saw Dawn McManus standing behind the group. Her face was white, dark eyes wide and frightened.

No man moved for a moment. Then, quite simply, without a word, Tim Jeffers peeled his heavy sheepskin coat, took a peavey from a man beside him and advanced.

"Never mind the fifty, Elliott. . . . It's my neck."

Ben smiled, then. It seemed as though he were so weary from effort and strain that he must have cracked and cried had he not smiled. He said no word. He swung up to the cab as the safety valve popped and steam commenced blowing off.

Ben threw more coal into the fire box, looked at his water gauge, shoved the reverse lever down into the corner and opened the throttle. The little old locomotive gave a sharp, an almost startled, bark as valves released their power, sending from its stack a great puff of cumulous vapor into the still morning air. The drivers spun and she let go a rapid series of exhaust coughs. He shut off; opened again, and this time the tires found purchase. The slack came out, the cars moved and, journals squealing, belching and stuttering, they broke over to the down grade.

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers the fire was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time limit is set. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed but a beautiful young woman.

Bank of Venice, Formed in 1157, Was First Bank

Recognition was given even in ancient civilization to the benefits obtained from the organization of a system designed to facilitate pecuniary transactions. Promissory notes, bills of exchange and transfer checks not unlike the modern bank check were used in Assyria, Phoenicia and Egypt long before they gained fuller development in Greece and Rome. It was not until after the ascendancy of Athens and Rome that banking came under official regulation. In its earliest form, banking consisted primarily of money changing, which was important due to the lack of uniform coinage and to the need for receipts and money transfers used to evade the danger of robbers.

The progress of banking was checked during the Middle ages; but with the revival of trade in the Eleventh and Twelfth centuries its practice was resumed.

The Bank of Venice, formed in 1157, is generally given as the first bank; it was only a transfer office of a national debt at first, and not a bank in the real sense until after the Sixteenth century. It was destroyed by the French invasion of 1797. Keeping depositors' money safe but accessible was perhaps first undertaken on a large scale by the Bank of Amsterdam, founded in 1609.—Indianapolis News.

INDIAN "MEDICINE"

A Lyons man who is convinced that the editor knows Indian "medicine" asked if we could not do something to chase zero weather away. We have to confess we did not because we are not thoroughly schooled in the dark arts of the redskin.

But we do know, from him, how to bring cold weather so that furs and skins may be better, that animals may be tracked in the snow and that spring may not come dangerously soon. You take a small boy and strip him naked. Then you start him going north from the village, cursing the north wind and defying the north wind to come and meet him. It will not be long until he comes running back with the old north wind growling at his heels and the frost king nipping his tender posterior.—Lyons News.

OUR EARTH TO END IN FLAMES?

Scientists See Fulfillment of Bible Prophecy.

According to Dr. Fritz Zwicky, a physicist associate of Dr. Robert A. Millikan, discoverer of cosmic rays, the Bible prophecy that "the earth shall melt with fervent heat," is strictly scientific and is the destined end of our whole solar system. None of us now present need feel alarmed about it, as it may not occur for many millions of years, possibly billions. But once in a thousand years some sun—to us only a point of light in the sky—has suddenly blazed up and then gradually disappeared. This is believed to be the result of an explosion, releasing the interior heat, estimated in our own sun to be an intensity of 20,000,000 degrees. In the case of our sun that would mean the instant conversion of all the planets and all upon them, if any, into gas and the disappearance of our entire solar system. That is what happened to such suns and solar systems, if they had any, which thus ended their careers during the past eons of time.

Such exploding suns are known as supernovas, an ordinary nova being a new star, not new in fact, but new to our vision. Doctor Zwicky says that astronomers are in expectation of such a phenomenon occurring near the Virgo universe by 1937, and are keenly on the watch for it. It is a tentative theory that cosmic rays are created or released by exploding suns and if this phenomenon actually occurs on time much more about that ray may be learned.

Of course, the year in which we observed it would not be the date of the actual explosion, since for us to see it now would require that it happened many thousands of years ago, so long does it take for light to reach the earth from such mathematical distances.

The mere discussion of such an event and mention of the great lapse of time and the incomprehensible distance from us of the scene of action, gives us a better mental conception of the grand universe, composed of innumerable universes, so overwhelming and so indicative of the superimmensity of creation, as to cause us to hesitate in giving too restrictive a definition of the Creator of it all.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Doctors Know!

... and they use liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.
